LOOK OUT BERRIEN, IT'S NOT OVER YET!

New Storm Is Headed This Way

Schools Shut Down; I-94 Is Snarled

A snowfall estimated from six to eight inches and fanned by 20 to 25 mile an hour winds snarled traffic and closed schools in northern Berrien county today.

At mid-morning today, the weather bureau at Grand Rapids warned the storm might intensify this afternoon along the lake front as result of a major wind shift. It said heavy snow could be expected to hit all along western Michigan's lake shore this afternoon, driven by strong winds. A meteorologist said this morning's storm here came from the southwest and that the new storm threatening this afternoon would result from another weather front to the north.

Traffic on I-94 was brought to a virtual standstill, as blowing snow reduced visibility to near-zero in many places along the superhighway.

TRAFFIC SNARLED
With the temperature standing as low as eight degrees below zero, work-bound traffic this morning in and approaching the Twin Cities developed numerous tie-ups.

A number of school buses had already started their morning runs but were forced to turn back because of the extremely poor driving visibility in the period from about 7 to 8 a.m. Announcements of school closing came belatedly in some cases. Two Lakeshore school system buses were reported stuck, one in a ditch on Lemon Creek road.

New Buffalo state police reported one of their patrol cars got stranded on I-94 this morning while enroute to an accident. Hundreds of big trucks were reported halted along the edges of the interstate highway, particularly in the area between Bridgman and Watervliet.

The blizzard appeared to center through the northern half of Berrien county. Law enforcement agencies in the storm center area reported a number of minor accidents, both late yesterday afternoon and evening and again this morning.

VAN BUREN SPARED
Police and highway officials in Van Buren county reported that conditions were not nearly as severe in Van Buren. South Haven state police reported a chain reaction crash involving three trucks and a car on I-196 near County Road 376 in South Haven township tied up traffic for nearly two hours late Wednesday. The only school system reported closed in Van Buren was Fennville, where some roads were plugged.

Pavement of I-94 was free of snow east of the Berrien-Van Buren county line. One traveler reported seeing some 30 to 50 cars and trucks in the median and ditches between Watervliet and Benton Harbor around 8 o'clock this morning. Hundreds more were halted along the sides of the highway. Traffic that was moving had about a five mile an hour pace.

Officials at the Twin Cities Ross field reported planes unable to land this morning chiefly because of poor visibility. Workers there were battling to keep one runway clear of drifts, however, for outbound planes.

A Benton township home was

Report Two Players To Take Lie Tests

Ask Probe To Clear Dawson

From ASSOCIATED PRESS
A U.S. senator has called for an investigation to clear the name of Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Len Dawson.

Two other pro football players will take lie tests to clear themselves of taint in the nationwide gambling investigation, according to The Detroit Free Press.

Odds on the Super Bowl jumped from 11 points to 12½ points with the Minnesota Vikings favored over the Kansas City Chiefs.

KARL SWEETAN

There were predictions that gamblers might even take the game off board — meaning they are afraid of it and would place no more bets.

"Hell, a subpoena, that's nothing. That just means they want to talk to you." This was the way Joe Namath greeted the NBC report that he was among six football personalities who would be summoned for questioning.

Pete Rozelle, football commissioner, called a press conference to announce that U.S. Atty. James Brickley in Detroit had assured him that no evidence had been uncovered linking a pro football player with gambling activities.

TIGHT SECURITY
"The same is true of our own investigation," Rozelle said. Pro football has a 29-man security staff headed by John J. Danahy, tough-minded 26-year veteran of the FBI.

These and other developments put a cloak and dagger atmosphere around Sunday's professional football playoff.

The Free Press reported that Bill Munson, Detroit Lions quarterback, and Karl Sweetan, a former Lion now with the Los Angeles Rams, will take the tests from a National Football league investigator either in Detroit or at league offices in New York.

Dawson, Namath, Sweetan and Munson were among the persons named by NBC which said the information came from an unnamed federal official. Others were Pete Lammons, New York Jets end, and Bob Devany, University of Nebraska coach.

14 ARRESTED
Fourteen persons from four states have been arrested on charges of violating federal wagering laws. More than $600,000 has been seized in cash and checks.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) called for an investigation of what he said "would appear to be an effort to degrade and intimidate" Len Dawson.

"It is unfortunate that any such story about one of the nation's great athletes should be leaked to the news media just prior to the most important professional football game of the season," Symington said.

The senator disclosed he was asking the U.S. attorney general to "investigate procedures in the office of both the U.S. attorney in Detroit and the local Internal Revenue Service office in that area in order to find out who is responsible for what, at best, would appear to be an effort to degrade and intimidate an outstanding American."

The publicity and rumors were having an effect in New Orleans where the Vikings and Chiefs battle.

Len Dawson admitted that his concentration had been affected. "I haven't slept too well the

Local Schools Explain Late Decision To Cancel Classes

They tried to make the right decision, but a 20 to 25-mile an hour wind starting about 7 a.m. blew their plans into a snow-drift.

That's about the way school chiefs sum up what happened in the Twin Cities area early today when they first sent out school buses and then recalled them after announcing schools would be closed.

Two other major north Berrien school districts, Coloma and Watervliet, apparently made their decision before buses left and called school off before 7 a.m. Niles, Buchanan, Gallien, Eau Claire and New Buffalo schools were reported still open at mid-morning. Snow was lighter in south county.

"Needless to say, because of the wind picking up we just geofed in our decision," Lakeshore Supt. Lionel Stacey frankly admitted. "Had the wind died down, our decision would have been all right."

Fortunately in the Twin Cities area the only result was to make students and school employees tumble out of bed and "suit up" for cold weather when they could have caught a few extra winks.

PARENTS IRATE
Some parents were irate, but school chiefs at Benton Harbor, St. Joseph and Lakeshore say they did their best, especially when road conditions were okay for bus travel around 6 a.m. when the decision to "go" was made.

But then the weather worsened. "Our whole decision is based on 'Can the buses run or can they not?' ...," said Stacey.

He noted school personnel traveled local roads and checked conditions from 5:30 to 6:30 a.m. and bus travel seemed permissible.

"But it was this wind that picked up shortly after 7 o'clock after the buses were on the road," he said. "We were in real trouble."

Benton Harbor school buses, for example, were on the road at 6:40 a.m. Weather and road conditions worsened and school was closed at 8:15 a.m. — yet many students managed to make it to school, school officials said.

St. Joseph school officials made the decision to go at 6 a.m., then recalled three buses and announced school was closed at 7:10 a.m.

Lakeshore school system made the go decision at 6:30 a.m. but closed at 7:45 a.m. Buses, each with a radio, were recalled though two — one with children, one without — became stuck. All children were reported returned home, however.

ZIEHNER STATEMENT
Said St. Joseph School Supt. Richard Ziehnner:

"A number of people have been highly critical of the late-ness of our decision to close the St. Joseph public schools. We regret any danger or inconvenience which may have been caused to students, parents and school employees because of the delayed announcement.

"At 6 a.m. roads and weather conditions in the district were reasonably good and it was decided to keep schools open.

"Conditions deteriorated rapidly and by 7 o'clock it was decided to recall the three buses which had left and to close the schools.

"In most cases of threatening weather it is possible to make a good estimate of conditions by 6 a.m. In this instance it was necessary to change the original decision and this in itself required additional time and phone calls."

He reiterated a pledge to make the school opening-closing decision as soon as possible in the future.

AMBULANCE SERVICE FOR BERRIEN IN JEOPARDY

The Schwarz Tri-County Ambulance of Niles announced last night that it was filing bankruptcy and would not be able to fulfill its contract with Berrien county, which expires Jan. 19.

The bankruptcy may leave most of Berrien county without ambulance service, since Action Ambulance has also threatened to cut off service to mid-Berrien county if their contract with Berrien county is not renewed. A action's one-year contract also expires Jan. 19, and Action owner Melvin Huttenga said the contract is unlikely to be renewed. He left for a business trip to Florida today and was not returning until Jan. 23.

If the contract is not renewed, Huttenga said he will continue service in the cities of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph and the townships of Benton, St. Joseph and Lincoln.

"We started three and one-half years ago in Benton township and we won't leave them," he said.

Huttenga said he has talked with supervisors and city officials and they indicated they would negotiate contract for ambulance service, even though it must be provided by the county, according to state law.

Both Benton township Supervisor Ray A. Wilder and St. Joseph township Supervisor Orval L. Benson have said they will have ambulance service and will enter a contract with Action to have it.

Action was seeking a new contract with Berrien county which would provide a $700 a month subsidy or $200 more than they receive under the present contract.

If the contract is not renewed, Huttenga said he would cut off service in the township of Soda, Pipestone, Berrien, Oronoko, Baroda, Lake and Royalton townships.

Ambulance service is still being provided by Gold Crown in Niles, the Lake Michigan Beach fire department and Coloma.

Schwarz ambulance notified police departments and Frank Poorman, chairman of the Berrien county board of supervisors, that they would not be able to accept calls after 6 p.m.

last night, and that they would not be able to fulfill their contract.

Schwarz, which began business Oct. 12, 1967, was a corporation owned by Ed Schwarz, Glen Carlson, Jack Mell and Marlin Eddy. Mrs. Judy Eddy, secretary, said Schwarz has four ambulances and made 1,633 runs in 1969.

The Gambling Noose Around Sports

Gambling is an ageless chink in mankind's makeup, so universal in all societies, we have been moved to ponder if somehow this common denominator among men could be employed as the means to finding world peace. Whatever their nationalistic differences may be, all peoples find it irresistible to lay a bet on something. If mathematics is the common language to express the other sciences, mayhap some statesman could implicate gambling as the communication to break down the barriers to world harmony.

This is a pipe dream in Utopian computerizing, and we offer the suggestion merely to illustrate the pervasiveness of wagering.

American's Puritan background has inveighed for the most part against legalizing gambling.

There are some exceptions to this tradition.

Reno and Las Vegas are familiar tourist traps. Louisiana ran its New Orleans lottery in the early 1800s until Congress forbade the mails to games of chance. Many states, Michigan included, operate pari mutuels on horse racing and/or dog racing. New York and Pennsylvania legalized bingo a few years ago as a revenue source for their school systems. And in spite of the Postal Regulations, it is no trick to buy a ticket on the Irish sweepstakes.

Still, the only generalized legal sanctification to gambling is limited to the Internal Revenue Code. One is supposed to report his winnings as taxable income. He can deduct his losses from the winnings, but if he ends up a year long loser, he can not deduct those excess losses against his other income.

How many people pay any attention to that provision is a statistic only the IRS could supply. If any Commissioner of Internal Revenue ever has publicized the figures, we have yet to know of them.

This combination of a deeply ingrained instinct and applicable law divides U.S. gambling into three classes:

There is a legalized segment best represented by the pari mutuels.

There is for lack of a better term, the penny ante stuff technically outside the law's pale. Familiar examples of it are charity bingo, poker and bridge parties, bets between friends or even casual acquaintances on sports.

The third element is organized gambling impartially utilizing the first two varieties. These bookmakers on the horses, football games and basketball contests, the three most popular vehicles, range from independent operators on through to the syndicate operators.

To speak of independents in the game is a liberal play with words. As all police agencies can tell the reader, the so called independent almost has to spread his risk with more affluent operators up the line if he is to earn more than peanuts at his trade. At the top of this pyramid or certainly woven in to the upper structure is the Mafia.

How much money changes hands annually through gambling can only be an educated guess.

The IRS simply estimates the syndicated type as a multi-billion enterprise. Our own guess would put the penny ante segment on the same level. Only the pari mutuel and the Las Vegas gambling can be targeted accurately.

The policy position on the pari-mutuels and the relative innocuity of penny ante gambling leaves syndicated gambling as the major concern. It is a battle in which the law comes out second best but keeps on fighting for two reasons.

One is the tax loss which the average citizen struggling with his Form 1040 has to make up from his pocket.

The second is the denigration which organized gambling brings down upon the objects of its speculation.

The gamblers ruined boxing long ago and nearly performed the same operation on professional basketball. Racing is only recently emerging from this cloud. Professional football has come close to being pulled into the pit. Collegiate athletics are not without danger of being tarnished.

The professional gambler is not content with the odds he lays in his favor. The fix is the needle to his normal profit just as brandy is a lacing for champagne.

New Year's Day the IRS and the FBI pounced on a gambling ring it had been casing for eight months. Their agents arrested nine men in Detroit and seized $620,000 in cash, three automobiles and gambling tickets. Simultaneously a smaller raid was made at Biloxi, Miss., and at Las Vegas the agents held a lengthy talk with Dizzy Dean, the former pitching great.

Dizzy, they indicate, is a cash messenger from losing betters to the syndicate's headquarters.

Subsequently the agents announced they want to talk with several pro football players, including the Kansas City Chief's quarterback, Len Dawson, whose names have arisen in conversations bugged by the law men. Also revealed was the prolonged suckering of a Lansing businessman whose compulsive gambling has cost him hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Although there is no claim and probably no evidence to support any wrongdoing by the football players, the fact of their names being tossed back and forth in conversations between betters and syndicate runners shows how organized gambling's tentacles reach out. Even the Nebraska University football coach's name appears in the tapes recorded by the agents.

The money seizure at Detroit, sizeable as it was, is only a temporary embarrassment to the main operators. The odds they lay contemplate such incidents as just another cost of doing business.

It has been advocated for years that full legalization of gambling would raise money for the public till and bring the professional under control.

The repeal of Prohibition supports the first argument, but we question if anything but continued pursuit by the law enforcement authorities would accomplish the latter. The very nature of the fast buck guy is such that no government could successfully harness his enterprising nature to useful purposes.

Sports' validity rests upon this harassment.

There's an old saying that fishing is one sport which can't be fixed. We would bet somebody could find a way to disburse the proverb's originator if the law allowed him the time and a free hand.

Inside Washington

WASHINGTON — The year-end decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court — the first issues on which Chief Justice Warren Burger was recorded — ran a wide gamut of topics, from civil rights, to pornography, to banking law, to business-vs.-labor, to law and order in general.

But if any sense at all can be made of the court's shifting coalitions on such divergent issues, it seems evident that President Nixon is meeting surprisingly early success in his stated goal of pushing the court back toward "strict construction" of the Constitution.

The first decision involving Burger, and the one which has received more publicity than the rest combined, was the Court's unanimous decision to accelerate school desegregation in the South. Since this was Burger's first decision, and since it harshly repudiated the go-slow approach previously adopted by the Nixon administration, many Washington legal observers interpreted Burger's ascent as his personal "declaration of independence" from the man who appointed him.

Whatever the merits of the case, it would not have looked altogether natural if the first decision of the Burger Court had been a 7-to-1 decision against the new Chief Justice, in a well-publicized case involving the administration. What was less generally noted was that in the next civil-rights case to come up, Burger found himself in the "strict constructionist" minority of a 5-to-3 division.

BUSINESS FAVORED

In his first majority opinion, Burger awarded a 6-to-2 victory to Florida state banking regulators in a dispute with the Comptroller of the Currency, a federal official. And in a significant business-labor case in which the new Chief Justice apparently broke an earlier deadlock, a strict construction favoring business was made of a 1927 law dealing with longshoremen's compensation.

Justice Byron White wrote the opinion, and was joined by Burger and Justices Harlan, Stewart and Marshall. The three dissenters — Justices Douglas, Brennan, and Black — are with Marshall expected to form a liberal core on many major issues. A recent study showed that business has defeated labor on less than 10 per cent of cases reaching the High Court in the last two decades. The indication is that this may be changing.

Even more telling, perhaps, than the issues on which Burger was recorded were those which the Court handed down unanimously and/or without comment — cases which in any given year represent the vast majority that the Court decides. The nature of those decisions had legal Washington shaking its head.

.. And Speaking Of Your Health

Everyone in my family says I can't hear, but . . .

Mr. E. O., Oregon
Dear Mr. O.: This is as far as I got with your letter before I showed it to my nurse and said, "I would like to tell you what is in the rest of the letter without reading it." I did, and it was almost an exact duplicate of the protest you made against the accusing members of your family.

I tell this not as an indication of personal accomplishment, but rather to indicate that this is a typical story of a typical person who typically refuses to admit that his hearing is poor. Almost always people with a hearing impairment say, "It's not that I don't hear, it's your fault because you mumble." Then they insist that everyone must talk louder and more distinctly. At the same time they refuse to acknowledge that they need some kind of aid to reinforce their hearing.

When a patient is brought to my office with a distinct hearing impairment for which a hearing device would be beneficial, he frequently says, "I don't want to wear an instrument, because I don't want anyone to know I can't hear." Whom do these people think they're fooling? Everyone soon learns that they are deaf or hard of hearing, and many simply avoid talking to them because it is such a strain on their own vocal cords.

There is a technique which I have found helpful for convincing patients of the need for an instrument. I simply lower my voice and refuse to scream instructions. When they don't hear me, they ask me to speak louder, which I refuse to do. Often the patient becomes irritated until I explain that I find no reason why I should help them with their problem by shrieking when they refuse to take advantage of the help that is available.

After a short while a new stage in our relationship develops, and they then ask me for the types of hearing aids that are available and are inconspicuous. Could it be put behind the ear, in the ear, in the eyeglasses, or hidden by the hair? These are rightful questions, yet many more are asked by those who are still trying to conceal evidence of their hearing impairment. Later, against advice, many of the deafened will be tempted to buy the finest instrument available in the naive aid is meant to be visible.

A hearing aid is meant to increase serviceable hearing. That is its only function. The benefits to hearing must not be sacrificed by buying an appliance only because it is advertised as being "without wires, without cords, and completely concealed."

I have never seen a good hearing aid that is totally invisible. If there is one, the hearing benefits, too, will probably be "invisible" to the naked ear.

The ideal way to choose and buy a hearing aid is to have a physician's evaluation of the type and extent of the hearing deficiency. The doctor's contact with hearing aid dealers makes it possible for him to refer a patient to a reliable one. Reliability and service are almost as important as the instrument itself. Far too often, enthusiastic door-to-door salesmen sell a hearing aid which finds itself, before long, in the desk drawer, unusual and functionless. These expensive instruments (and many are far more expensive than they should be) must be sold only to those who will benefit from them. Over-selling by over-zealous salesmen can only lead to disappointment for the person who wants to be liberated from silence.

My partner, Mrs. Dorothy Hayden, opened with a diamond and, over my spade response, bid two diamonds. I jumped to three spades (foreing) and Mrs. Hayden raised to four.

There was nothing to the play. West led the eight of hearts and East correctly read the lead as a doubleton. He cashed the North-South were using a combination of Roman and Key-card Blackwood according to which the king of trumps, in response to four notrump, is counted as an ace. Apparently there was a complete misunderstanding in the bidding. North presumably intending his five club response to four notrump as a cuebid, while South understood the call to show three aces.

In any case, South contracted for seven spades and it would be unfair to blame West—who recognized that the opponents had slipped a cog somewhere along the line—for choosing the ace of clubs as his opening lead. Declarer ruffed in dummy, drew trumps, and brought home the grand slam with tricks to burn.

Deciding that it was time for a drastic step, she cut off his allowance entirely, leaving him only his car to get about in. The remedy failed. The moral of this sad story is: Spare the hot rod and spoil the child.

Frustrated, she gets herself into hot water but chickens out. On the Borscht circuit, Mr. Maljean figures his play should earn a hot dollar profit. Served Earlier As President Of Whirlpool

Robert E. Brooker, 64, has announced that he will retire in May as chairman and chief executive officer of Marcor, Inc., and its retailing subsidiary, Montgomery Ward & Co.

Brooker will reach the mandatory retirement age of 65 several weeks after May. However, he will remain a key figure in Marcor by becoming chairman of the executive committee and continuing as a director. Marcor was formed 14 months ago by a merger of Montgomery Ward and Container Corp. of America.

Brooker became president of Montgomery Ward in 1961 after being president of Whirlpool Corp. since 1958. He was active in civic affairs while a resident of the Twin Cities. He came here from Sears Roebuck where he was vice president in charge of the factory division.

This administration of Montgomery Ward was marked by stability and then sales growth after the company was in a weakened competitive condition during post World War II and scarred by a stormy proxy fight for control.

Brooker became board chairman of Ward in 1968 and chairman of Marcor after the merger. Succeeding him as Marcor chief executive officer will be L. H. Schoenhofen, 54, who will continue as president. Edward S. Donnell, president of Montgomery Ward, is expected to succeed Brooker as Ward chairman.

Officials of both companies were optimistic about the future. Marcor expects a gain in profits for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31. In fiscal 1969, Marcor had total earnings of $53.8 million on sales of $2.5 billion.

Gordon Worley, financial vice president, said Marcor is projecting sales growth of 8 percent for the next four years, bringing total sales to 3.7 billion by 1974. Earnings growth of 14 percent a year is projected.

Ward plans to add 9 million square feet of store selling space in the next five years, double the rate of expansion the last five years.

$188,650 Grant For Three Oaks

Sale Of Bonds Approved For Two Townships

The Berrien County Public Works board received notice Wednesday of a $188,650 grant to Three Oaks for a sewage system, plus approval for a $1.5 million bond sale at higher interest for a Lincoln-St. Joseph township sewage system.

Planning Director Thomas Sinn said the Michigan Water Resources commission and Federal Water Pollution Control Administration jointly notified the board of the Three Oaks grant. A bond sale is planned for February to finance the rest of the $780,000 sewage system.

Three Oaks, through the public works board, failed to sell a county-backed $780,000 bond issue last Aug. 19 at a 6 percent interest rate. Plans now are to re-offer the bonds — probably $750,000 minus the $188,650 grant — at the state 8 percent maximum interest rate.

The grant to Three Oaks is expected to be formally accepted by the Public Works board at a special meeting Jan. 19. The board must act quickly because contracts with construction companies, made last Aug. 13, expire on Feb. 13.

Also by letter Wednesday, the Michigan Municipal Finance commission okayed the public works board sale of $1,565,000, county-backed bonds to finance a sewage system in Lincoln and St. Joseph township at a new higher 7 percent maximum average interest rate.

The same bonds were offered — with no takers — at 6 percent interest on Dec. 29. The bonds will be re-offered Jan. 19 at 2 p.m. at the 7 percent maximum average interest rate, which permits some sections of bonds to sell up to 8 percent.

The bond market currently is slightly over 6 percent, Sinn said. Though it may change, the public works board will ask county supervisors in a Jan. 19 meeting for authority to sell the Three Oaks bonds and the Lincoln-St. Joseph township bonds at 8 percent maximum interest. This request is meant to save time later.

Buchanan Hospital Is Being Sued

A rural Sawyer couple filed suit this week in Berrien circuit court claiming $70,000 damages against Buchanan community hospital for an illness the woman claims she suffered allegedly from hospital employee negligence.

The suit, by Mr. and Mrs. David Sweet, came in the form of a counterclaim following the hospital's suit against the Sweets in Fifth District court for some $1,327 in allegedly unpaid hospital bills.

The Sweets claim Mrs. Sweet became seriously ill with an infection while hospitalized for tonsillitis during March and April of 1967.

Also this week, a Dowagiac woman, Polly Ann Baranowski, filed a $15,000 suit against K-Mart of Benton Harbor charging K-Mart employees made false statements that resulted in her arrest on a theft charge May 3, 1968. She claims she was acquitted by jury.

Charge Is False, U-M Dean Says

Claims Whites Aren't Barred

ANN ARBOR (AP) — A University of Michigan official has labeled as false a state law-maker's charge that white students are banned from certain black studies courses at the university.

The charge was leveled Tuesday by Rep. Stanley Powell, R-Ionia, who said he had asked the attorney general's office to investigate the alleged practice by the U-M psychology department.

Wednesday, however, Dr. William L. Hayes, dean of the University and the Arts, said there is no truth to it whatsoever, when asked to comment on Powell's charge.

"These classes are thoroughly mixed," Hayes said. "There are more black students in some and more white students in others, but all have both black and white students enrolled," he said.

Hayes said the courses are open to any eligible student regardless of race.

Lakeshore Jaycees Back Nixon

Cards Supporting Vietnam Police Are Distributed

Lakeshore Jaycees are backing a U.S. Jaycees program to provide citizens with a means of expressing support for President Nixon in the Vietnam war effort.

Bob Wisner, project chairman, said cards addressed for mailing are available in Lakeshore area supermarkets and other business places. The cards read "Mr. President: You have my support in your efforts to bring about a just and lasting peace."

At a recent meeting, the Lakeshore Jaycee chapter adopted a resolution "in support of the policy of the President of the United States in southeast Asia and so communicate such support to him."

Lakeshore Jaycees believe action should be taken immediately to support the president, Wisner said. "The enemies of our country have interpreted the actions and words of the vocal minority as the true mood of the American public. The North Vietnamese are trying to weaken our President's negotiating position."

"United We Stand" and the Lakeshore Jaycees call upon Americans to join in letting the world know that we stand squarely behind our elected president in his effort to secure peace," Wisner said.

LANSING (AP) — The Michigan Tourist Council will meet at Traverse City Saturday to plan final details on future advertising programs.

Ronald Gamble of Greenbush, council chairman, said plans will be set up for the 1970 spring advertising campaign. The Council also will review results of 1969 tourist promotional efforts.

The council has an annual advertising budget of $410,000.

William McGraw, council director, said all regions of the state reported the finest holiday skiing on record.

"We just have experienced a record-setting holiday season at our winter sports facilities," McGraw said.

Traditionally, he said, the period between Christmas and New Year's establishes the success of the entire winter season.

1970 Blossom Parade Theme

'Great Moments In History'

History's memorable moments, from the beginning of time through the epic of the moon landing will become float themes for the 1970 Blossomtime parade.

The Blossomtime floral parade committee has chosen "Great Moments In History" as theme for this year's May 9 festival. Last year's parade attracted over a quarter-million spectators and was televised and broadcast over several radio and television stations.

Charles Campbell, chairman for the parade, said that communities participating in Blossomtime events not only help promote Michigan's largest festival, but give some well-deserved publicity to the towns, companies and organizations.

Southwestern Michigan communities, industries, businesses, and clubs are urged to choose a theme from history, the world-over, and call Blossomtime headquarters in Benton Harbor for the necessary theme clearance.

Only one float of one particular theme will be permitted in the parade because of the wide variety available. Themes will be approved on a first come, first serve basis. Choices will be reserved by the telephone call from area float chairmen but a written application must then be submitted within seven days to Blossomtime Inc., 777 B Riverview drive, Benton Harbor.

Entry deadline is Friday, April 19. Suggestions offered for portrayal are "Fall of the Roman Empire," "First Airplane Flight," "Moon Landing," or "Father Marquette Discovers Berrien County."

Any historical event considered important to the local communities may be named as a float theme.

Eighteen awards and trophies will be given winning entries in the floral parade.

Winners will be based on animation, flowers, beauty, originality and best portrayal of theme.

KEY REPUBLICAN IN FEUD WITH MILLIKEN?

Union Leader
Gets SurpriseFinds Public And Press
At Eau Claire MeetBy RALPH LUTZ
Staff Writer

EAU CLAIRE—Uncertainties and surprise marked a contract negotiating session here last night between representatives of the Eau Claire board of education and International Union of Operating Engineers.

Both sides talked for about two hours and scheduled another meeting for 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 26.

Uncertainties stemmed from language of a proposed contract the union is trying to negotiate for custodians, maintenance men and bus drivers of the district. The employees voted Oct. 6 to be represented by the International Union of Operating Engineers. The session last night was the second.

Board representatives indicated uncertainty over language of the proposed contract, saying their prime efforts so far have been to look for a new superintendent.

Surprise was evidenced by Robert Inman of Jackson, union business agent who said he was dumbfounded to enter the high school cafeteria meeting room to find public and press present.

WANTS PRIVACY

Inman commented that this was a negotiating session. He said it's best to conduct private talks and then present the results after both sides ratified terms of the contract. Inman agreed to have the open meetings, however, but emphasized that he should have been informed before.

Some 20 citizens were present, along with Donald G. McAlvey, who sat in on the meeting as the newly-hired Eau Claire school superintendent. McAlvey said he will assume duties here on Jan. 19 and then joined the meeting mostly as a listener.

McAlvey has been personnel assistant at the Benton Harbor school district. John Glassman, school board president, told Inman that "all meetings of this school district are open to the public."

BOARD SKEPTICAL

Inman found that board members, for the most part, were skeptical over the proposed contract, partly because they said there had not been enough time to fully digest the contents and largely because of the money involved in proposed fringe benefits.

The board in its December meeting reported that these benefits would include eight paid holidays, district-paid surgical and hospital insurance, district-paid life insurance and cumulative sick pay.

The economics of each proposed employee benefit were not discussed last night, but Inman emphasized that each item is negotiable. He said the final package should benefit the employees and be one that the district can live with.

Board representatives generally feared that to meet all suggested contract items, district residents would have to vote on extra millage, probably 1-mill.

Citizens present were also skeptical over expensive benefits for the employees, most of whom were termed part-time employees.

Traffic Mishap

BANGOR — The death of a Bangor woman in a mishap on Dec. 15 has been declared a traffic fatality, according to Bangor police chief Jack Gettrist.

The death of Mrs. Peggy McNatt, 29, increases the 1969 Van Buren County highway death toll to 32. It is four less than in 1968.

Mrs. McNatt died when she was apparently struck by a car as she crossed a bridge over the Black River and was thrown into the water.

The driver, Dale Berry, 29, route 1, Bangor, has since been charged with negligent homicide. A preliminary examination in Seventh District court will be held at 1:30 p.m. Jan. 12.

Gettrist said that results of an autopsy into the cause of death will not be made public until the examination.

Adamkus, a Republican, moved to his new position with the recommendation of the late Illinois Sen. Everett Dirksen. Adamkus ran and lost for sanitary district trustee in Chicago in 1958, but he received a strong backing from the predominantly Democratic area.

Mrs. Adamkus said her husband expected to be at Arlington for two months with a move to the Chicago regional office at a later date.

Tabor Farm, now in its 77th year of business was owned by the late Joe Bachunas for almost 50 years. Mr. and Mrs. Adamkus served as resident managers for some time, then bought the business in 1962.

Cigarette Blamed
For Fatal Blaze

HARTFORD—State police theorized today that a fire in which Lester W. Cox, 64, of rural Hartford died Wednesday afternoon, may have been started by a lighted cigarette.

The fire occurred about 2:15 p.m., shortly after the Cox car ran off the road shoulder on 66th avenue, about 100 feet west of 67th street, four miles southwest of Hartford.

Pending the results of an autopsy performed earlier today, Cox's death will be listed as a fire death, rather than a traffic fatality, state police from the Paw Paw post said.

Traffic investigators said Cox, an employee at Duffy-Mott fruit processing plant, was apparently on his way home when his car went off the road and a lighted cigarette may have ignited either his clothes or the car's interior.

An area resident reported seeing the fire, state police said, but by the time he reached the site the interior of the car was engulfed in flames.

Police said the car had not been damaged when it went off the road, but had extensive interior damage from the fire.

State police said the Cox car had been pulled from another ditch shortly before the fatal fire and that Cox had been reported as being unsteady, or possibly ill at that time.

The driver's door to the car was open, state police said, indicating that Cox had made an effort to get out of the car.

The body was taken to Calvin funeral home, Hartford, where arrangements were incomplete this forenoon.

BORN IN ILLINOIS

Mr. Cox was born in Robinson, Ill., May 2, 1905.

He was a member of the Coloma Masonic Lodge and attended The First Baptist church of South Haven.

Survivors include his widow, the former Hazel Toms, whom he married Dec. 19, 1925, in Judsonia, Ark.; a daughter, Mrs. Vera Lynn Boynton of Ann Arbor; two grandchildren; and three sisters.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Calvin funeral home, Hartford.

The Rev. J. D. Tolbert, pastor of the First Baptist church, South Haven, will officiate. Burial will follow in Maple Hill cemetery.

Waldron
Upset By School BillSenate Passage
Is Branded As Unconstitutional

LANSING (AP)—The ranking Republican in the Michigan House is convinced his Senate colleagues committed irrevocable error in passing Gov. William Milliken's billion-dollar school aid bill for next year without first reviewing his budget for the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Minority Leader Robert Waldron of Grosse Pointe said Wednesday he will introduce two new bills—one of them a separate parochial measure—when the Legislature reconvenes next Wednesday.

The purpose, Waldron said, would be to correct what he considers unconstitutional action by the Senate in acting last month on the billion-dollar measure that Milliken himself requested as part of his education reform package.

By passing that bill, the Senate gave its approval to a formula that would allocate some $25 million in state funds for private and parochial schools. Waldron said he, in effect, would reintroduce the school aid measure. He would include changes, amounting to an estimated $60 million more than the Senate version, approved by the House Appropriations Committee.

Long a foe of parochialism on grounds it violates the State Constitution, Waldron said he believes the Legislature also is prohibited by the Constitution from appropriating any funds until it hears the governor's budget message.

Citing Article 4, Section 31 of the 1963 State Constitution, Waldron said, "my position is that (it) is absolutely void as it is in front of us. The Constitution prohibits the Senate's action, which cannot be corrected. The bill is void."

The Constitution states that general appropriations bills, such as school aid, are to be based on "items set forth in the budget." The budget itself commonly is presented to the Legislature sometime after it convenes in January.

This fall's education reform session, according to Glenn Allen Jr., state budget director, has considerably delayed preparation of that major fiscal report for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Speaker William Ryan, a Democrat and principal advocate of parochialism, said he doubted if Waldron would succeed in pushing his two bills through the House Education Committee to the floor.

Waldron, said Ryan, "is reading restrictions on the legislative process into the Constitution. The Legislature is free to act as long as there is no constitutional restriction on it."

Legal aides in the executive office tend to support Ryan's interpretation, as they did when Milliken first proposed early action on the bill.

Waldron seems to be the only one taking that position," said one Republican familiar with administration thinking on the issue.

STRONGEST STATEMENT

Waldron's statement, meanwhile, was the strongest he has made on education reform and parochialism since the latter issue was defeated last May. His reticence led to speculation that a rift had developed with Milliken over parochialism or perhaps the entire reform package.

The governor, Waldron said, "is trying to make the state's education systems amenable to accounting, and I am 1,000 per cent in support of that."

But he added: "I am more vehemently opposed than ever before to parochialism. If we are to start that now, it will always be an issue—how much of the pie is to go to the churches?"

"It will be a never-ending issue. This kind of religious issue was required to be excluded forever from these legislative halls by the Constitution."

Further action on the Senate-passed bill could jeopardize a court suit over the constitutionality of parochialism, Waldron said, because of the questionable timing.

Rather than face the parochial issue, the court might simply decide the Senate followed incorrect procedure, he explained.

Ryan, meanwhile, said Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley studied the issue and is "willing to state the bill was validly passed."

Kelley's office said Wednesday that Ryan received "informal advice" from a staff member who concluded "there probably was no problem" with the Senate's action.

No formal opinion has been delivered, however, the aide said.

Township
Will Await
City ActionSouth Haven
Group Tables
Survey Plans

By TOM RENNER

SOUTH HAVEN — Members of the South Haven township board Wednesday night tabled a suggestion that it conduct a survey as to its future water and sewer needs, contending that the city of South Haven must first guarantee that the service will be available.

South Haven city manager Albert Pierce in a letter to township supervisor Richard Bus suggested that the township engage an engineering firm to develop a plan.

The city is already considering a study of its own system. The cost to the city, as estimated by the firm of McNamee, Porter and Seelye of Ann Arbor, would be $25,000. The firm estimated that a survey in the township would cost about $5,000.

AGREEMENT NEEDED
Township trustee Donald Getman contended that city should first enter into an agreement to provide the services.

Last fall the city council and township board appointed a committee of its members to study the feasibility of extending sewer and water services beyond the city's corporate limits. That committee has not reported the results of its study.

The township board agreed that the Lambert subdivision, located along M-140 south of Blue Star Memorial Highway, required first attention when considering a sanitary sewer lines. Some board members felt that engineering surveys already existed for extending service to the subdivision since city water and sewer lines already follow M-140 to Blue Star, but not into the Lambert area.

In other action, the board approved the hiring of the architectural firm of Stapert, Pratt and Sprau, Inc. of Kalamazoo to design plans for the remodeling of the new township hall at a cost not to exceed $500.

The board, which hopes to be in its new quarters by its annual meeting next April, approved the purchase of a walk-in vault door for $697.

It was agreed to negotiate with the Covert township board about the possibility of sharing the cost of maintaining a proposed street light over M-140 at 24th avenue.

The zoning board will hold its first meeting tonight. Bus reported. Members of the board include chairman Tom McConnell, Sr., Glenn Cowles, Lawrence Vandentak, and D.W. French.

The board agreed to share the costs of improving the Peterson drain on Eighth avenue. The township and Van Buren County road commission will each pay $1,057 while the State highway department will pay $636.

Two Escapees
Are Recaptured

PELLSTON (AP) — Two escapees from the Pellston Honor Camp had only 30 minutes of freedom Wednesday. State Police said William Green, 23, and 22-year-old Lee, Bacon walked away from the camp about 12:45 a.m. and were recaptured by 1:15 nearly five miles from the camp. Troopers said they were waiting when the car emerged from a Conservation Department garage with a jeep they had taken to aid their escape. Tracks in the snow at the camp indicated the fugitives were heading for the garage and troopers were waiting there.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Wall Street Is Really Not Paved With Gold

By SAM SHULSKY

"Q. — I was talked into buying some low-priced preferreds with substantial arrears on the promise that I'd have a nice profit when the arrears were paid up. But the stock has gone even lower.

A. — I keep insisting that Wall Street is NOT paved with gold and that whatever profit-making potential there is around is being closely watched, hour by hour and day by day, by experts equipped with electronic calculators.

And yet, not a day passes but what some one who admits he "knows nothing about the stock market" writes to inquire why a "sure-fire" profit hasn't materialized.

Three of these popular "sure-fire" types of "bargains" (which rarely pay off) come to mind:

1. A $1,000 bond with a 4 1/2 coupon, selling at about $350 with maturity in, say, 1970 or '71.

2. A cumulative preferred stock selling at $12 a share with dividend arrears of, say, $27.50 a share.

3. A preferred stock selling at $75 which is redeemable at $103 beginning Jan. 1, 1971.

In every case, the unsophisticated reader who discovered these "bargains" immediately jumped in and bought them and then began to wonder "how come no one else thought of this?" The answer of course is that hundreds, thousands of others HAVE thought of it and, equipped with a better understanding of finance, have said "It's too risky and to hell with it."

For the facts are:

1. That bond now selling at $350 hasn't a ghost of a chance of being paid off at $1,000 in 12 or 15 months. If it had, there would be plenty of bond experts (and in these matters the experts set the market price) who would soon buy enough of the bonds to raise its price substantially closer to that $1,000.

2. A cumulative preferred stock with $27.50 arrears against it sells at $12 exactly because preferred stock experts are convinced there isn't much chance of that $27.50 being paid off in the foreseeable future, if ever.

3. Most preferreds and bonds are redeemable at par or slightly above. But redeemable means "able to be redeemed." It DOES NOT mean MUST be redeemed. If a corporation's $4 dividend preferred stock is selling at $75, why would the corporation call it in at $100 or $103, thus paying off capital which costs it 4 per cent when it would have to turn around and raise additional money at 9 per cent or more? Preferreds are, sometimes, redeemed. But you can be sure that when even a small premium is paid it is for money market reasons, or for reasons known only to the "insiders." Your chances of having a corporation pay you $100 next June for a stock now selling at $75 are just about nil.

I'm always amazed that people who can be so careful when they are offered big "bargain" watches, or tires, or cameras should suddenly abandon all caution and convince themselves they've found a "big bargain" in Wall Street.

Back Pay Ordered For GM Workers

FLINT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will have to pay back wages of between $1.3 million and $1.5 million to about 540 Chevrolet Assembly Plant employees laid off because of a strike at the adjacent Fisher Body Plant No. 2.

The order to pay has been made by an umpire, called to make a decision binding on both GM and the United Auto Workers Union.

In addition, the umpire ruled that some of those laid off will replace low seniority employees at the assembly plant's truck line, which is still running.

The employees affected by the decision were furloughed after the Fisher body plant strike began Sept. 24. The umpire, Rolf Valtin, was called in when the union local filed a grievance, claiming that the local seniority agreement had been violated.

A hearing was held Dec. 19. The strike, the longest in GM history, still continues at the Fisher plant.
